PCC's 2nd International WOMEN'S DAY Celebration

Hello everyone! Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen! Thank you so much for inviting me to speak on the 2nd Anniversary of International Women's Day held at Patkai. It is indeed a pleasure and honor to be here this afternoon and address a mixed crowd of academia, well-wishers, young millennials and friends. I want to start by recognizing and appreciating the team of intellectuals and pioneers who have geared into this venture to look beyond the tumultuous times that we live in and host an event such as this, thank you and congratulations.

And most of all, I want to thank all of you who are present here and the wonderful progress that you have made to continue what you have started and not to make it a one-time show. Your advocacy to transform the lives of so many women of the next generation is truly commendable and so titled my talk as The Issues Relating to Women and their Inclusive Growth.

Now I guess, we are familiar with the literacy statistics in the country. Around 200 million women are illiterate in India and in Nagaland, although literacy rate is high in High School, the dropout rate in Secondary level is high. But this is an overall picture, our agenda is bordering on women's upliftment because when girls hit adolescence and develop into young adults, they are subjected to societies' biases around gender and that's the reason their education lags behind. It is attributed to apathy and resistance of parents in the lower section of society, unfavorable attitudes towards co-education, poverty of parents, shortage of schools, poor quality of instruction, distance is associated with direct transportation costs as well as opportunity costs since more time is needed to travel to and fro implies less contribution to household chores etc.

Though initiatives have been launched by GB's, volunteers, NGOs, village councils, and adult literacy programs, we are far from achieving the goals. Looking at the grim scenario of cultural and institutional barriers, child marriage, teenage pregnancy, sexual abuse, gender-biased violence, being forced into female foeticide, non-availability of skill-based opportunities, lack of hygiene and proper sanitation for adolescent girls, lack of special package for uneducated differently-abled women, one cannot help thinking how can these issues be resolved?

That's why we are gathered here to focus on the inclusive growth of women because young ladies deserve a chance to fulfill their potential and I believe education is the foundation to erase such biases.

First and foremost, I want us to look at the Bible in the formation and upkeep of gender equality. God created man and woman in His own image and blessed them, He gave both male and female to rule, to multiply and nurture children. Every gender inequality was broken by Joel ch2:28, "I will pour out my Spirit on all flesh, your sons and daughters will prophesy..." Jesus combated the pre-Christian attitude on many occasions, e.g., by restoring the Samaritan women, healing Peter's mother-in-law, appreciating the widow's mite and so on—that means strength and equality is given to both.

So Yes! Solving our girls' education crisis is definitely about resources, but it is also about attitudes and beliefs. It's about whether or not our parents, elders and men think our daughters are as worthy of an education as their sons. It's about whether our societies cling to outdated laws, taboos and traditions that oppress and exclude women from high-ranking jobs, or whether their view of women are as full citizens entitled to equal rights? And in this battle, we need our fathers, brothers, sons and men.

A story goes about a merchant in the Middle East who did business in buying rugs, so he went to one bazaar to another, hoping to find a beautiful rug to export. One day he

Educated unemployment' a defining challenge for government, educational institutions

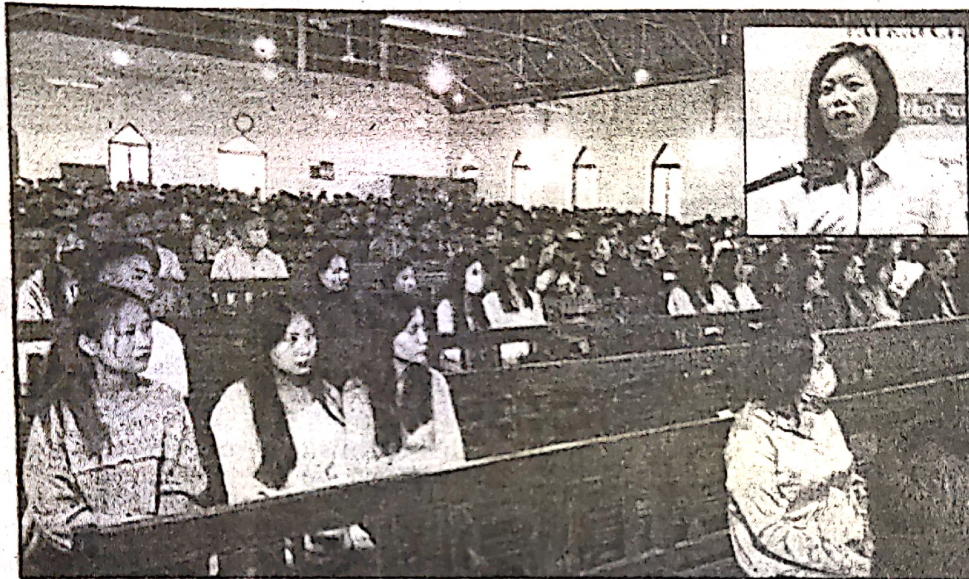

PTKAI, APRIL 3 (ExN): Consistency is the driving force for being 'gainfully employed and happy at work' and one's career orientation and planning should begin early, according to Sri Shakti Puraskar Award-winning founder of YouthNet Hekani Jakhalu Kense.

Highlighting the issue of unemployment in the state of Nagaland, Hekani was addressing the 'World of Work: Preparing for the Future' talk organised by the Woman Cell and Gender Champion, Patkai Christian College (Autonomous) on April 2 in the college campus.

Hekani said, 'Youths in Nagaland are talented and creative but the biggest challenge is inconsistency.' Referring to the statistics, she informed that Nagaland has the highest urban employment in the North-East and highest rural-urban unemployment in the country.

According to a press release from the college on Sunday, she also expressed the need to reverse the statistics of unemployment rate in the state and called upon the students to start early in deciding their goals.

Hard work, consistency and being goal oriented are important to be successful, she said, while adding that the 'world of work' is filled with challenges as one exposes themselves to real working set up.

Chairing the programme, Dr Dakter Esse Jamir, HOD Multimedia and Mass Communication said that the New Education Policy 2020 is targeted at addressing the issue of unemployment.

Unemployment, particularly educated unemployment is a defining challenge for any government as well as the educational institutes. Accordingly, this demands reorientation, reorganization and re-adaptation of the developing scenario, she stressed, adding that it calls for change at foundational level.

Manager, YouthNet, T Sepila Zhimomi, spoke at length on the importance of skill development, internship and career guidance. Research shows that people spend more time preparing on vacations, planning out holidays rather than career, Zhimomi said. To this she opined that educational institutes should encourage industry exposures for students.

The talk was followed by an interaction moderated by, Dr Imlisunep Changkery, Assistant Professor, Department of Economics, PCC wherein students from various departments raised questions on issues concerning their current state.

On a query by a student from the department of Multimedia and Mass Communication (DMMC) about internship opportunities provided by YouthNet, the resource person Hekani informed that 'YouthNet is open for providing internship and attaching students to various private organisations for internship'.

She also spoke about 'shadowing', which the YouthNet is keen at helping the youths with. Shadowing is a term used for assisting observing and learning from senior officials in different organisations.

Asked on key ingredients required to maintain consistency with one's goal from a student from department of Commerce she noted 'the mind is the most powerful tool; one has to train their mind to be focused and avoid distractions.'

On the question of parental and peer pressure a student from the History department, the resource person said that one needs to realise their potential and interests and align it to choose a career.

Earlier, the programme started with invocation. Kasa Losa, Assistant Professor from the Department of Education while Mr Thungoe, Assistant Professor, Department of Philosophy shared the welcome address. Dr Razoukhri Curhah Kehie proposed vote of thanks and Rev Vichukho Ngukha gave benediction.
