The Department of Mass Communication, Patkai Christian College (Autonomous) organised a workshop on ‘Matrix of Just Peace’ with Dr Aküm Longchari, peace and conflict activist and editor of The Morung Express, as resource person on October 13, 2023.

During the day-long workshop, Dr Longchari engaged the students in several exercises as he broke down concepts of conflict, power, how it manifests in society, peace, justice, and Just Peace, an update from the college stated.

He pointed out that most nation-states approach peace from a security perspective and so there is a lot of investment in defence and law enforcement whereas there is little investment in peace studies. “If there is a need to approach peace from a security perspective, it should be from a human security perspective,” he asserted.

On understanding power, he demonstrated with an exercise its structure and dynamics and shared that power can be of three types- over people, within people, with people. It is important to know who wields power in order to understand the structure and dynamics, he said, further noting those at the top of the structure try to maintain their positions, while those at the bottom can be lulled into acceptance.

On the mechanisms of power, Dr Longchari shared that it should undergo a process, contending that it becomes an imposition devoid of a process. He added that if power changes hands, without changing the structure, the status quo remains.

In another exercise, he demonstrated how easily a group of people or community can be divided by the ‘powers that be.’ At times, it can be executed via small privileges here and there, he said. The ‘divide and rule’ has now transcended to ‘define and rule,’ he insisted.

On the effects of conflict, Dr Longchari viewed that conflict affects four dimensions of life- personal, relational, structures and culture. When there is a conflict, it changes the person, their relationships, existing structures and their attitudes and behaviours, he explained. Accordingly, it is easy to strip people of their ‘humanity’ during a conflict, he said. “The consequence of conflict is dehumanisation,” he added.

On achieving Just Peace, Dr Longchari demonstrated through an exercise that Truth, Mercy, Justice and Peace should be the anchor points for reconciliation. He said that the point where Truth, Mercy, Justice and Peace meet is the start of genuine reconciliation. These concepts cannot work in isolation.

Citing examples of World War II, East Timor and post- Apartheid South Africa, he illustrated how devoid of these anchor points, processes to find justice or peace did not result in genuine reconciliation.

Workshop on Creative Direction

The Department of Mass Communication, Patkai Christian College organised a workshop on creative direction at Mass Comm studio, PCC on October 21, 2023.

Three public service announcement videos made by the third year Mass Communication students were released during the workshop in presence of Tiakumzuk Aier, Director, Dreamz Unlimited as the resource person.

The short videos titled ‘Lulu’, ‘Social media a trap house’ and ‘Human Trafficking’ is part of an extension activity of the department to create awareness in the society on pressing issues and concerns.

Following the screening, Aier gave feedbacks and pointed out the areas which require attention for their future projects. He also shared the journey of Dreamz Unlimited and his experience in film making and direction. Filmmaking needs patience and passion and to bring a story to the people one needs to be open to learning and being observant of the things happening around. Aier said that as filmmaker and director, one need to spend time writing a good script. “Let the script be the hero,” he impressed.

Aier also highlighted the common mistakes amateur filmmakers make of which he explained about weak story, bad sound, poor casting choices, poor lighting, generic music, shots without purpose etc.

The biggest challenge in filmmaking is funding and the platform to screen the films that can aid in investment returns, to which he said OTT apps can act as a major boost.

Sunep, actor, member of Dreamz Unlimited spoke on acting and emphasized that an actor should understand the story while reading the script and not just limit to their own dialogues but also of the co-actors to keep the flow and tempo of the script.

Earlier, Neilevono Vüprü, Dean of Social Sciences, PCC in her speech stated that the trait which makes an individual different from the other is their ‘Power of Creativity’. She expressed hope that the workshop would spark and ignite creativity among the students. She urged the students to shed off laziness and idleness, and encouraged them to be confident, consistent, disciplined and to challenge the self and make use of the opportunities given.

The session started off with the welcome address by Dr Dakter Esse Jamir, Head of Department, Mass Communication, invocation by Khakuli Chishi and concluded with vote of thanks by Motsuthung Ovung. Eriwe Kapfo was the compere for the day.

The department of Mass Communication had a Conversation with an alumnus Miss Zachano Tsoepoe (Batch of 2020-2023) on 3rd April, 2024 at 1:30 pm in the Social Science Conference Room. The Program was led by Ms. Wano Yanlem, 4th Sem. Ms. Isampoile Mbungcha, 4th sem said the invocation, followed by a welcome address from Ms. Kakhuli Chishi, 6th Sem. Dr. Dakter Esse, Assistant Professor, in her short speech welcomed Zachano back to the extended family and also encouraged everyone to focus on their degrees.

Assistant Professor, Mr. Rojenn Wahengbam presented the speaker with a shawl as a token of appreciation on behalf of the department of Mass Communication.

Ms. Zachano Tsoepoe who is an event management professional shared her experience working with several mega events despite her nascent career. She said that her initial perception about event management was that it only concerned weddings. She talked about how her interest in Event management grew as her study in Patkai had engaged her in conducting events like Film Festival, Photography Exhibition etc. and decided to pursue Post Graduate Diploma on Event Management from Xavier Institute of Communication, Mumbai.

She also talked about her struggles in Mumbai. “Everything was different and new; the air the water, the food, the culture,” she said. She mentioned about instances when she had faced discrimination because of her looks. However, she encouraged her juniors to push themselves to go out of their comfort zones. “There's so much opportunities and life outside of our own home state,” she said.

She also mentioned how difficult and competitive it was out there but said that one should follow their heart and learn as much as possible. She suggested that the students start using LinkedIn insisting that it is a very useful app which lots of professionals and experts from various industry use.

After her talk, there was a short Q&A session and the program concluded with a vote of thanks from Mr Sopei Rungung, Assistant Professor.

Altogether, 25 students and faculty participated in the masterclass.

Concrete blocks were made from shredded thermocol and glass bottles alongwith some amount of cement which according to Shri Kelhusesi, was found to be more stable and provides more cooling than the commonly used concrete blocks. The machines and equipments used are all custom-made-locally maintaining their functionality to require energy to the minimum.
